单词数：227个　小初3500词　　DATE:

The Tang Monk introduced himself to the prince and then waved toward the others. "These are my companions. We're going to the Western Paradise to get scriptures from Buddha."

"What's going on?" asked the prince. "Why did the monkey lead me here?" "The man ruling the Black Rooster Kingdom is not really the king, " said the monk. He told the prince everything.

When the Tang Monk's story was finished, the prince was furious. "You're lying! I will have you

The Tang Monk reached into his robe. He pulled out the jade coin. "Your father told me to show you this."

The prince gasped. "That coin belongs to my father! It's a royal treasure." He began to cry. " Your story must be true. My poor father. All this time, people thought that evil Daoist was him."

"Don't worry," said Wukong. "We'll get rid of that fake king."

Late that night Wukong lay awake. "The Daoist will deny everything," he thought. "We need proof that he killed the real king."

He poked Bajie, who was fast asleep. "Bajie, wake up."

The pig rolled over. "Leave me alone . . . sleeping."

"We need to do something," said Wukong. " Not now," mumbled Bajie. "I know where there's
