E62：Journey to the West （The Goldfish in the Basket 观音菩萨的金鱼）

单词数：271个　小初3500词　　DATE:

"A few days ago," repeated Wukong. "That means it's been on Earth for a few years." "Correct," said Guanyin. "The Tang Monk is safe now. You may go free him and continue your journey to the Western Paradise." Guanyin flew off, and Wukong swam down to the palace.

Now that the goldfish was gone, so was its magic. The monkey smashed the rocks with his iron bar and went inside. "Master, I'm here!" he cried. He got the monk out of the box and carried him out of the river.

By now all the villagers had heard that Wukong had saved Chen's son. When the travelers returned, the villagers cheered. "Please stay in our village!" said a man. "Yes," said an old woman. "There's no rush to leave. Stay for as long as you like." "Thank you," said the Tang Monk. "But we can stay only one more night, to rest. In the morning we must leave. We still have far to travel."

The villagers held a feast for the travelers that evening. By the time everyone went to sleep, it was late.

The next morning the travelers woke to the sound of chopping. "What's going on?" asked the Tang Monk. They went to the river and found a very busy scene. Several men were chopping down trees. Other people carried tools. "We're building a boat for you!" said a smiling man. "Thank you," said the monk.
