Bajie snorted. "You all wait here," said Wukong. "I'll check out the mountain to see how big the demon army is." The monkey flew to the mountain. Several demons were talking in front of a cave. They were dressed like military officers. Wukong spied on them from behind a rock.

"The Tang Monk will be coming over our mountain soon," said a demon general. "Our leaders want all the troops to watch for him." "I hope we catch the Tang Monk," said a captain. " I've heard that anyone who eats him will live

"But who will get to eat the monk?" asked another captain. "There are thousands of troops in our army." "We'll all get to eat him," said the general. "Our leaders promised to share him with the entire army." The other officers nodded and smiled. "That was very kind of our leaders," said a captain. "We must be careful though," warned the general.

"Why?" asked a colonel. "The monk is just a man. He can't possibly stop us." "I've heard that the Tang Monk isn't alone," said the general. "Sun Wukong is with him." Everyone grew quiet.

"He's the spirit who defeated Heaven's entire army," whispered a captain. Another captain nodded. "He is quite powerful." Wukong beamed proudly when he heard that.
